IAMS PET FOOD RECALL

The Procter & Gamble Company has voluntarily recalled specific lots of dry pet food because they have the potential to be contaminated with Salmonella. These lots were distributed in the United States and represent roughly one-tenth of one percent (0.1%) of annual production. No Salmonella-related illnesses have been reported to date in association with these product lots.

Contaminated food can sicken pets and humans who handle it. Symptoms of Salmonella are mainly vomiting and diarrhea. If your cat may have eaten the contaminated food and you notice any changes in their activity, a visit to your veterinary is recommended to start symptomatic treatment and antibiotics.
